TOKYO, JAPAN

The world's third largest economy, Japan is the proud Host of the 2017 Global Summit of Women. Japan — offering a highly attractive business environment which benefits from social and political stability — is synonymous with technological innovation and is recognized as the gateway to the Asia Pacific region.

In recent years under the leadership of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, Japan has made a strong commitment to increasing the role of women in leadership positions by setting the goal of women holding at least 30% of senior positions in all parts of society by 2020. In addition, Tokyo, the world's largest metropolitan economy and home to 14 million people, is currently led by Governor Yuriko Koike, the first woman to hold the office.

Governor of Tokyo, Yuriko Koike

While Japan's business environment continues to be dynamic and robust, increased regional competition and an aging workforce have led Prime Minister Abe to adopt 'womenomics' as key to his country's continued competitiveness. His vocal commitment to women's increased workforce participation has led major business groups like the Japan Association of Business Executives to set proactive measures to grow women's talents and leadership opportunities. These steps will have long-term impact in Japan Inc. and in the country overall.

The Global Summit of Women looks forward to having its international participants become more acquainted with Japan's women leaders and the country's business community.
